Hassle-free IP Telephony solution for small offices and home workers launched by Ipitomi

Hosted IP Telephony provider Ipitomi today launched its IP Telephony service designed specifically for Small offices and Home offices (SoHo). Our feature-rich telephone system uses state-of-the-art Cisco technology and allows customers to obtain a hassle-free, rented telephone system which will be fully operational in a matter of days.

Ipitomi SoHo allows customers to connect up to 24 handsets of your choice through an existing xDSL or broadband connection at speeds from 512K upwards. Customers can then use the internet as well as the latest telephony features that are normally associated with only large scale telephone systems.

The Cisco IP handsets which Ipitomi provides simply connect to your router or switch. All customers need to do is plug in and switch on. It really is as simple as that. Alternatively, Ipitomi can do this for you according to your preference. If customers don't have an existing DSL line or switch, Ipitomi can arrange for these too. Ipitomi is a one stop shop that allows customers to get on with business, leaving the communications to them.

Ipitomi will be demonstrating this new service at the IP 08 show on the 1st and 2nd October at Earls Court, London and welcomes SMEs and remote workers to join them.

One of the advanced features of this solution include Single Number Reach (one telephone number which rings your landline and mobile device simultaneously) so users can be accessed regardless of their location increasing business productivity. The service also enables Desktop Integration so users can select a phone number from a desktop application (internet) and the system dials this particular number.
